

Students at USC Columbia oft forget to upkeep their living quarters. This leads to their living spaces falling into disarray. This result displeases their fellow tenants and reduces their general health, making it more difficult for them to succeed at university. This in turn reduces overall student well-being.